

U. P. WOULD BUILD UP UTAH

Railroad Attorney Puts Up Company's Version In C. P. Controversy

The Union Pacific's position in the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific controversy is that the Union Pacific is willing to buy the Central Pacific if reasonable terms can be agreed upon. The Union Pacific is not seeking control of the Central Pacific, but wishes the Central Pacific to be operated independently of the Southern Pacific, according to John V. Lyle, assistant attorney general of the Union Pacific, who delivered an address to the Ogden chapter, American Association of Engineers at the weekly luncheon held in the Weber club today at noon.

He said the supreme court had found as a fact that the Southern Pacific was diverting traffic from Utah along the Southern Pacific Sunset route to the Mexican border. Mr. Lyle said. The Southern Pacific says he continued that it is not doing that now. "But," he asked, "what are they going to do if they take the Central Pacific back again? They will naturally follow selfish interests and divert traffic over the 100 per cent road." He said the Southern Pacific is soliciting in the east, on the coast and in the orient for their Sunset line and diverting traffic out of Utah. It means, he said, so long as the Southern Pacific controls the Central Pacific there will be less men employed in Utah and less wealth for taxation.

Mr. Lyle said there could be no doubt but what the decision of the supreme court would be upheld. He called attention to the argument of the Southern Pacific that if the Union Pacific is given control of the Central Pacific that the Ogden gateway would be closed, and reminded those who make that argument that they forget that the Western Pacific and D. & R. G. W. are parallel lines.

Mr. Lyle said the Union Pacific will bring $5,000,000 people annually from the east into Utah, that these people will stay in the state at least five days, spending $5 a day, and that the company is preparing to spend millions of dollars for railroad development and hotels in Utah.

Mayor Frank Francis declared that it was a crime for the Southern Pacific to continue control of the Central Pacific and that Ogden would become a large railroad center if the Union Pacific wins in the present case.

C. W. Cross presided at the luncheon. A number of business men were present, including Mayor Francis, Commissioner Arthur E. Larson, Judge H. H. Rolapp, Warren L. Watts, Frank Briggs, J. T. Eldredge, Jr., C. R. Hollingsworth, W. H. Shearman, N. A. Tanner and W. A. Whitney.

WEBER ALUMNI REUNION SET

Old Grads to Gather at Alma Mater on January 4

The annual reunion of the Weber college alumni will be held at the college the evening of January 4, commencing at 8 o'clock.

The principal address will be delivered by Levi Edward Young, professor of history at the University of Utah. The program will include recitations by the Weber college band and alumni quartet, songs by Nephil J. Brown and Miss Melba Douglas, remarks by President Aaron Tracy, Wiley G. Cragun and Delbert Wright, community singing, class songs, etc.

Dancing will follow, during which refreshments will be served. The "old grads" will hold individual reunions prior to the general session. They will meet in rooms to be designated on the bulletin board, beginning at 7 o'clock.

The reunion will be purely social. There will be no expenses nor collections for any purpose. President Aaron Tracy said.

R. H. SIDDOWAY GOES TO PRISON

(Special Dispatch.) SALT LAKE, Dec. 29.—The Utah supreme court in a decision handed down today denied a new trial to R. H. Siddoway, state fish and game commissioner, under the Simon Bamberg administration. Mr. Siddoway had been found guilty of embezzling state funds following a trial in the district court at Salt Lake. He was given an indeterminate sentence.

Today's supreme court action means Mr. Siddoway must go to the penitentiary to serve his sentence. The decision, which was written by A. J. Weber, sets forth that a careful study of the evidence fails to disclose how Siddoway could have been found otherwise than guilty.

BUSINESS BETTER, SALESMEN FIND

Business is very much better throughout Utah, Nevada, Idaho and Wyoming.

This was the consensus of opinion expressed last night at the annual banquet held at the Weber club of the salesmen and department heads and officers of the John Seawright & Sons' company following the annual convention which began yesterday at the company's offices.

The traveling salesmen cover practically every town and city in the four states and have been in a position to note carefully the trend of business.

They agreed that the worst of the business depression had been passed and that from now on there would be a decided improvement in trade in general.

Those that traveled through Idaho said that in that state in particular business conditions were showing a decided improvement.

Otto Meckes, credit manager, reported that collections were decidedly better than heretofore and said that those that were inclined to take an optimistic view of that phase of the situation were doing so on substantial grounds.
